STATE of BLACK
HEALTH

March 2-4 | Charlotte, NC

The State of Black Health Biennial Conference will feature several concurrent breakout sessions. Presenters will highlight successful programs, campaigns, or advocacy efforts that have led to reasonable, clear, and transferable promising practices. All abstract submissions should review observable outcomes rather than theory-based data analyses. Preference will be given to authors who have been actively engaged in the program, campaign or advocacy effort. Presenters should be able to discuss public health implications and real-world application of the project. Community, state and federal-level relevance should be apparent. Ideas presented should be aspirational, dynamic and energizing for those in attendance. Hence, an optional video submission has been added to the submission process.

ABSTRACT TOPIC AREAS

Abstract submission must fall within the three (3) tracks of the conference.

Wellness & Chronic Diseases Disparities

This track reviews corporate, community, healthcare, and governmental public health efforts that are moving the needle toward reducing HIV or other chronic disease disparities. Sessions may discuss how specific policies, community initiatives, or public health campaigns are impacting health disparities and how they can be replicated within communities nationwide.

Subject areas may include but are not limited to:

- Tobacco Use
- Epidemics and pandemics including COVID-19
- Addressing breast, cervical, colorectal and/or prostate cancer screening disparities
- Addressing HIV prevention and stigma/ Increasing awareness and usage of PrEP
- Mental health and mental health stigma
- Heart disease and stroke
- Diabetes prevention
- Health Equity resources
- Social marketing and health communications campaigns
- Role of the black family in fostering a culture of health

Economic Barriers

This track will explore how unemployment/underemployment and the attainment of livable wages contribute to current health disparities and remains a primary concern in African American communities. Presenters may discuss policies, programs or services designed to promote economic parity for individuals from underserved populations. Submissions may also review solutions to reduce the ever-expanding income gap, encourage entrepreneurship, increase employee productivity, promote employee health, and/or accommodate employees living with a chronic disease.

Subject areas may include but are not limited to:

- Livable wages and/or wage gaps
- Discrimination in the workplace
- Safety in the workplace
- Wellness programs
- Interference of disease, trauma or stress on employability
- Wellness incentive programs

Institutional Injustices

This track will address how injustices in our nation's judicial, educational and federal institutions produce unhealthy communities and promote health inequity. Submissions may explore the impact of institutional racism on the health of African Americans and should highlight policy initiatives and promising practices that provide resources at the state and local level to address this issue.

Subject areas may include but are not limited to:

- Crime
- Education
- Food security/Food deserts
- Clean air and green space
- Housing and transportation issues
- Gun violence
- Racism and its impact on health
- Police brutality/Community policing solutions
- Sex trafficking
- Mass incarceration, prison reform, and/or re-entry programs
- Taxes, fines and fees imposed on African American communities
- Flavored and mentholated tobacco restrictions
- Affordable Care Act

All submissions must identify one of the following subcategories:

Policy: Abstract addresses policies that should be supported, passed or ended that would improve health outcomes for African Americans.

Community Action: Abstract addresses promising practices that communities are implementing to improve health outcomes for African Americans.

Decision Makers: Abstract addresses the role of decision-makers such as physicians, public health administrators, politicians, faith leaders, and employers in improving health outcomes for African Americans.

ABSTRACT SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

COMPONENTS:

Background:

Summarize the purpose, scope and objectives of the program, project or policy.

Description:
